

SHELF LIFE

The latest range of wall-mounted shelves by British design house Kukka is a surefire hit for those who work alongside the coolest office furniture. Laser cut and created using folding machinery, lines are slick and without ugly, obvious wall fixings.

HOW HOT

These new salt-glazed tumblers are made using an age-old technique that fires them in a 2250-degree kiln, leaving each one with a unique identity. The alabaster numbers are stencilled on and each tumbler is handmade to order.

LONDON CALLING

It's ten years since the London Design Fair opened. Today, it's a must-see on the calendar of any design aficionado worth their salt. The event is packed full of the best emerging talents, and international design houses including Out For Space whose KC bench (pictured) is typical of the exciting products on display at the festival. Hero homes

There's a lot to be celebrated in Scottish architecture, not least LJR+H Chartered Architects' Zinc-House in Angus (pictured). The build-inspired by a collection of abandoned farm sheds and united by one continuous roof was one of 11 winners at this year's RIAS Awards.
